T. Kenneth Cribb, Jr.

T. Kenneth Cribb, Jr., a native of South Carolina, is president of the Intercollegiate Studies Institute in Wilmington, Delaware. He received a B.A. from Washington and Lee University and a J.D. from the University of Virginia School of Law.

Mr. Cribb was deputy to the chief counsel of the 1980 Reagan campaign. During the Reagan transition, he was deputy director of the Legal and Administrative Agencies Group, Office of the Executive Branch Management. He went on to serve the Reagan Administration for almost the entire eight years of its existence, beginning in 1981 as assistant director for the Office of Cabinet Affairs. He served next as assistant counselor to the President, in which capacity he assisted Counselor Edwin Meese. When Mr. Meese became Attorney General, Mr. Cribb accompanied him to the Justice Department where he became counselor to the Attorney General of the United States. In 1987, Mr. Cribb returned to the White House as assistant to the President for domestic affairs and served in this position until the fall of 1988.

Statement of Leonard A. Leo, Executive Vice President
The Federalist Society for Law and Public Policy

My name is Leonard A. Leo, and I am the Executive Vice President of the Federalist Society for Law and Public Policy, of the United States. I want to begin by thanking the Secretariat for admission of the Federalist Society as an observer to these proceedings. I also want to complement the Director General of WIPO and the International Bureau on its fine work over the preceding years.

There has in the recent years been much debate on the proper agenda, mission and direction for WIPO. I am very interested in ensuring that there is a high level of dialogue, representing all perspectives, on the proper agenda for this body. Therefore, I want to read into the record a statement of an Empowerment Agenda, supported by a long list of experts in the field of intellectual property. This Empowerment Agenda seeks the international recognition and protection of intellectual property as a means of assisting developing countries. It is the firm belief of the supporters of the Empowerment Agenda that the robust enforcement of intellectual property rights will lead to positive development in developing countries. We offer this agenda as a potential framework for further discussion and dialogue by this esteemed body.

Congratulations to those gathered to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the Jay Sekulow Live! radio program.

Across our country, radio plays an important role in informing and entertaining the public. Since 1995, your radio station has kept citizens up to date on current events and issues and has helped citizens stay connected with their communities and our Nation.

This milestone serves as an opportunity to reflect on the dedication of your staff and your years of service to your audience. Your efforts help encourage responsible citizenship and advance the ideals that make America strong. I applaud your commitment to excellence in your industry.

Best wishes for continued success.

About Chief Counsel

Jay Alan Sekulow is Chief Counsel for the American Center for Law and Justice (ACLJ), a law firm and educational organization that specializes in constitutional law. He is also Chief Counsel of the European Center for Law and Justice (ECLJ).

An accomplished and respected judicial advocate, Sekulow has presented oral argument before the U.S. Supreme Court in numerous cases in defense of constitutional freedoms.

Several landmark cases argued by Sekulow before the U.S. Supreme Court have become part of the legal landscape in the area of religious liberty litigation. In the Mergens case, Sekulow cleared the way for public school students to form Bible clubs and religious organizations on their school campuses. In the Lamb’s Chapel case, Sekulow defended the free speech rights of religious groups, ensuring that they be treated equally with respect to the use of public facilities. And, most recently, in McConnell v. FEC, Sekulow ensured that the constitutional rights of young people remain protected with a unanimous decision by the high court guaranteeing that minors can participate in political campaigns.

A nationally recognized and respected defender of religious freedom, Sekulow has assembled one of the most prestigious law firms in the nation. Founded in 1990, the American Center for Law and Justice specializes in constitutional law. The ACLJ, under Sekulow’s direction, is involved in public interest and public policy issues working to protect religious and constitutional liberties.

In 2005, TIME Magazine named Sekulow one of the "25 Most Influential Evangelicals" in America and called the ACLJ "a powerful counterweight" to the ACLU. Business Week said the ACLJ is "the leading advocacy group for religious freedom." Sekulow’s work on the issue of judicial nominees - including possible vacancies at the Supreme Court - has received extensive news coverage including a front page story in The Wall Street Journal. In addition, The National Law Journal has twice named Sekulow one of the "100 Most Influential Lawyers" in the United States. (1994, 1997) He is also among a distinguished group of attorneys known as "The Public Sector 45" named by The American Lawyer. (January/February 1997) The magazine said the designation represents "45 young lawyers outside the private sector whose vision and commitment are changing lives." Sekulow serves as a member of the Board of Trustees for The Supreme Court Historical Society in Washington, DC.

Sekulow brings insight and education to thousands of listeners daily with his national call-in radio program, Jay Sekulow Live!, which is broadcast throughout the country on more than 550 radio stations reaching 1.5 million listeners a day. Sekulow also hosts a weekly television program, ACLJ This Week, which tackles the tough issues of the day and is broadcast on a number of networks nationwide including the Trinity Broadcasting Network and FamilyNet. Sekulow is also a popular guest on nationally televised news programs on ABC, CBS, NBC, CNN, FOX News, MSNBC, CNBC, and PBS. He frequently contributes articles and commentary to national publications and is often quoted in the nation's leading newspapers including USA Today, New York Times, Los Angeles Times, Washington Post, and Washington Times.

A graduate of Mercer University, Sekulow graduated cum laude receiving both a bachelor's degree and doctor of jurisprudence from Mercer University where he served on the Mercer Law Review as an editorial staff member.

He also received a Ph.D. from Regent University, with a dissertation on American Legal History, and is the author of numerous publications and law articles.

June 14, 2005

I send greetings to those celebrating the opening of Prison Fellowship and Prison Fellowship International’s new facilities in Lansdowne, Virginia.

Government cannot create character, but it should respect and support institutions that do. My Administration strongly supports faith-based and community organizations that provide a helping hand to those in need. Through the Prisoner Reentry Initiative, the Departments of Justice, Labor, and Housing and Urban Development are providing mentoring, job training, housing assistance, and other transitional services to help reduce recidivism. We remain committed to making sure faith-based groups can compete on an equal footing for Federal dollars to mentor children of prisoners and help individuals leaving prison transition back to community life and gain long-term employment. America is a land of second chances and when the gates of prison open, the path ahead should be an opportunity for a better life.

Since 1976, Prison Fellowship has shared the message of God's boundless mercy with prisoners, former prisoners, and their families. I applaud your efforts to reach out to the prison community. By renewing a spirit of purpose in the lives of prisoners and their families, your good work reflects the compassion of our Nation and contributes to a culture of responsibility and citizenship.

I also appreciate the leadership and service of Mark Earley and my good friend Chuck Colson. Their dedication to building a more hopeful future for inmates and their loved ones serves as an inspiration for others.

Laura and I send our best wishes on this special occasion.

About Chuck Colson
Biographies

PF Founder: from political "dirty tricks" to a genuine conversion to Christianity

Almost 25 years ago, Charles W. Colson was not thinking about reaching out to prison inmates or reforming the U.S. penal system.

In fact, this aide to president Richard Nixon was "incapable of humanitarian thought," according to the media of the mid-1970s.

Colson was known as the White House "hatchet man," a man feared by even the most powerful politicos during his four years of service to President Nixon.

When news of Colson's conversion to Christianity leaked to the press in 1973, the Boston Globe reported, "If Mr. Colson can repent of his sins, there just has to be hope for everybody."

Colson would agree. He admits he was guilty of political "dirty tricks" and willing to do almost anything for the cause of his president and his party.

In 1974, Colson entered a plea of guilty to Watergate-related charges; although not implicated in the Watergate burglary, he voluntarily pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice in the Daniel Ellsberg Case.

He entered Alabama's Maxwell Prison in 1974 as a new Christian and as the first member of the Nixon administration to be incarcerated for Watergate-related charges. He served seven months of a one-to-three year sentence.

In 1976, Colson founded Prison Fellowship Ministries, which, in collaboration with churches of all confessions and denominations, has become the world's largest outreach to prisoners, ex-prisoners, crime victims, and their families. Colson has spent the last 25 years as head of Prison Fellowship Ministries.

Colson saw early on that reconciliation among offenders, victims, their families, and communities should be a ministry of the Church. He set Prison Fellowship in place to exhort, equip, and assist the church in this ministry. That decision marshaled the involvement of the Church in prison outreach.

Colson has visited prisons throughout the U.S. and the world and has built a movement working with more than 40,000 prison ministry volunteers, with ministries in 100 countries. In the course of touring prisons worldwide, he became deeply concerned with prison conditions and the need for better access to religious programs.

Colson's personal prison experience and his frequent visits to prisons also prompted new concerns about the efficacy of the American criminal justice system and made him one of the nation's influential voices for criminal justice reform. Colson's recommendations have brought together legislators from both political parties and divergent philosophical viewpoints. In 1983, Colson established Justice Fellowship, now the nation's largest faith-based criminal justice reform group.
To help stem the cycle of crime and poverty, Prison Fellowship, under Colson's leadership, introduced Angel Tree, a program that provides Christmas presents to more than 500,000 children of inmates annually on behalf of their incarcerated parents. These simple acts of kindness have revitalized hope and reconciliation among millions of children and their families, many of whom subsist below the poverty level. Angel Tree has also launched a summer camping program, partnering with churches in eight selected areas around the country to send the children of prisoners to a Christian summer camp.

Because Colson understood that the work of changing prisoners' lives should be a global endeavor, Prison Fellowship International was formed in 1979 under his direction. It has since expanded to include national chapters in 88 countries.

Increasingly, Colson sensed God's calling to comment on the culture through the written and spoken word. He has written 20 books, which have collectively sold more than five million copies. His autobiographical book Born Again was one of the nation's best-selling books of all genres in 1976 and was made into a feature-length film.

In 1991 Colson launched a daily radio feature called "BreakPoint," a unique and well-received attempt to provide a distinct Christian worldview on everyday issues and conflicts. The program is aired daily on over 1,000 radio outlets nationwide.

Colson's commitment to the unity of the Church led to his co-authorship of a cutting-edge document "Evangelicals and Catholics Together" that significantly helped to build an important bridge between Protestants and Catholics.

His 1987 book Kingdoms in Conflict was a best-selling directive to the Christian community on the proper relationships of church and state, and it positioned Colson as a centrist evangelical voice for balanced Christian political activism.

In recognition of his work, Colson received the prestigious Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion in 1993, donating the $1 million prize to Prison Fellowship. Colson's other awards have included the Humanitarian Award, Dominos Pizza Corporation (1991); The Others Award, The Salvation Army (1990); several honorary doctorates from various colleges and universities (1982–2000); and the Outstanding Young Man of Boston, Chamber of Commerce (1960).

In 1999, Colson and Nancy Pearcey co-authored the groundbreaking book How Now Shall We Live? challenging Christians to understand biblical faith as an entire worldview, a perspective on all of life. In this book, Colson and Pearcey argue that the great battle of the twenty-first century is a struggle between the spiritual and the secular worldviews.

In his most recent book, The Good Life, Colson reflects not only on his life in politics, prison, and ministry, but also on the lives of historical figures and ordinary people, examining what makes life worth living. He concludes that finding what is true and sacrificing ourselves to that truth lies at the heart of living a good life.

While Colson is one of the Christian community's most sought-after speakers, he has resolutely refused to establish a speaking fee. Perhaps anticipating criticism of any appearance of self-enrichment by a former Watergate figure, Colson donates all speaking honoraria and book royalties to Prison Fellowship, and accepts the salary of a mid-range ministry executive.

Despite his work critiquing the culture, Colson's heart is ever with the prisoner. He has clearly never forgotten the promise he made to his fellow inmates during his brief stay in prison: that he would "never forget those behind bars."

Visiting Fellow

Jeffrey Bell is a Visiting Fellow at the Ethics and Public Policy Center. He and EPPC board member Robert P. George are writing a book tentatively titled Social Conservatism: The Great Divide in American Politics.

Mr. Bell is a principal of Capital City Partners, a Washington public affairs firm. In that capacity, he has assisted clients advocating the Bush tax cuts of 2001-2003, the President’s faith-based initiative, and immigration reform. Since 2003, he has participated in Capital City Partners’ contract with the Department of Health and Human Services to promote greater awareness of human trafficking in the United States.

In 1975 Mr. Bell developed Ronald Reagan’s first proposals for federal tax and budget reduction. In 1978, he became an early proponent of the Kemp-Roth tax cut bill and upset an incumbent U.S. Senator, Clifford Case, in the New Jersey Republican primary. He was defeated in the general election by Democrat Bill Bradley.

In 1980, Mr. Bell produced and co-wrote the television commercials used by the Reagan presidential campaign in New Hampshire and subsequent primaries.
