Poll: Kerry has big California lead, Bush's ratings have plunged

(02-25) 06:34 PST SAN FRANCISCO (AP) --

Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry holds a wide lead over John Edwards among likely voters in next Tuesday's Democratic presidential primary, and President Bush's approval ratings in the state are at their lowest level since he took office in 2001, a new poll found.

The nonpartisan Field Poll released Wednesday shows Kerry with 60 percent support among likely voters, compared with just 19 percent for Edwards, a senator from North Carolina. Rep. Dennis Kucinich of Ohio had 3 percent support, Rev. Al Sharpton had 2 percent, and 11 percent were undecided.

"These numbers in California are mapping the national sentiment," said Mark DiCamillo, director of the Field Poll. "This election is like a national election as it comes to each state. What happens in Iowa, what happens in New Hampshire has an incredible effect, including in California."

Meanwhile, the poll showed Bush's approval ratings have taken a marked plunge in the last month. Just 43 percent of California voters say they approve of the job he is doing, while 51 percent disapprove. In January, the numbers were almost reversed, with 52 percent saying they approved of the president's job performance while 42 percent disapproved.

Voter disapproval was highest on Bush's handling of the budget deficit -- 67 percent said they disapproved of the job he is doing, while just 27 percent approve. A majority also disapproved of his handling of other key areas, including illegal immigration, health care, the economy and the war in Iraq.

Just 38 percent said they considered Bush a leader they could trust, while 61 percent said they had doubts and reservations about him.

PERFECT
SCENARIO

DiCamillo called those figures "damning," saying voters' lack of trust in Bush undermined their views of his performance on a range of issues.

"It's been shown that there are no weapons in Iraq -- that started Americans thinking, can we trust this guy on his word?" DiCamillo said. "Plus the Democrats have been hammering on Bush for a month and a half, with great effect, and it's wounding him."

The poll showed Bush losing to both Kerry and Edwards in hypothetical matchups. Kerry would beat Bush 53-41 percent among registered California voters, while Edwards would defeat the president by a margin of 51 percent to 42 percent.

The poll, conducted Feb. 18 through 22, was drawn from interviews with 958 registered California voters -- of which 497 were likely Democratic primary voters. The overall poll

As Sen. John Kerry, Massachusetts Democrat, considers a bid for the White House, Americans should know a few things about him that he might prefer go unmentioned -- and I don't mean his $75 haircuts.

When Mr. Kerry pontificated at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Veterans Day, a group of veterans turned their backs on him and walked away. They remembered Mr. Kerry as the antiwar activist who testified before Congress during the war, accusing veterans of being war criminals. The dust jacket of Mr. Kerry's pro-Hanoi book, "The New Soldier," features a photograph of his ragged band of radicals mocking the US Marine Corps Memorial, which depicts the flag-raising on Iwo Jima, with an upside-down American flag. Retired Gen. George S. Patton III charged that Mr. Kerry's actions as an antiwar activist had "given aid and comfort to the enemy," as had the actions of Ramsey Clark and Jane Fonda. Also, Mr. Kerry lied when he threw what he claimed were his war medals over the White House fence; he later admitted they weren't his. Now they are displayed on his office wall.

Long after he changed sides in congressional hearings, Mr. Kerry lobbied for renewed trade relations with Hanoi. At the same time, his cousin C. Stewart Forbes, chief executive for Colliers International, assisted in brokering a $905 million deal to develop a deep-sea port at Vung Tau, Vietnam - an odd coincidence.

As noted in the Inside Politics column of Nov. 14 (Nation), historian Douglas Brinkley is writing Mr. Kerry's biography. Hopefully, he'll include the senator's latest ignominious feat: preventing the Vietnam Human Rights Act (HR2833) from coming to a vote in the Senate, claiming human rights would deteriorate as a result. His actions sent a clear signal to Hanoi that Congress cares little about the human rights for which so many Americans fought and died.

The State Department ranked Vietnam among the 10 regimes worldwide least tolerant of religious freedom. Recently, 354 churches of the Montagnards, a Christian ethnic minority, were forcibly disbanded, and by mid-October, more than 50 Christian pastors and elders had been arrested in Dak Lak province alone. On Oct. 29, the secret police executed three Montagnards by lethal injection simply for protesting religious repression. The communists are conducting a pogrom against the Montagnards, forcing Christians to drink a mixture of goat's blood and alcohol and renounce Christianity. Thousands have been killed or imprisoned or have just "disappeared." The Montagnards lost one-half of their adult male population fighting for the United States, and without them, there might be thousands more American names on that somber black granite wall at the Vietnam memorial.

As Mr. Kerry contemplates a run for the presidency, people must remember that he has fought harder for Hanoi as an antiwar activist and a senator than he did against the Vietnamese communists while serving in the Navy in Vietnam.

Michael Bengé is a Foreign Service officer and a former Vietnam POW (1968 to 1973)

PRESIDENTIAL POLITICS

Bush would be wise to heed trouble brewing on his right

It would be difficult to find a more committed supporter of President Bush than Rep. Mike Pence, R-Ind. Pence, who is in his second term, is a self-described "Christian-conservative-Republican" in that order. He is the essence of the Bush base, which is why his Jan. 22 speech to the Conservative Political Action Conference gathering in Washington ought to cause concern at the White House.

After testifying to his pro-Bush (and pro-Reagan) credentials, Pence suggested that the "ship of conservative governance has gone off course."

Pence's indictment included this line: "Many who call themselves conservatives see government increasingly as the solution to every social ill and — let us be clear on this point — this is a historic departure from the limited-government traditions of our party and millions of its most ardent supporters."

Congressional Republicans and the Bush administration apparently believe they can buy the votes of a number of groups — including the elderly (prescription drug benefits) and Hispanics (amnesty for illegal aliens) — but once a federal law or policy is in place it is more difficult to kill than a vampire.

In his speech, Pence pointed to the Education Department as one of many examples of government gone wild. "A decade ago, when I first ran for Congress, Republicans dreamed of eliminating the federal Department of Education and returning control of our schools to parents, communities and states. Ten years later, (we get) the 'No Child Left Behind Act' — our Reaganite beliefs that education was a local function were labeled 'far right' by Republicans and the president signed the bill into law with Ted Kennedy at his side."

About prescription drug benefits for seniors, Pence said many conservatives were prepared for a limited program, "but instead of giving the president what he requested, the Congress — the land of the $400 hammer — (created) the largest new entitlement since 1965, a massive one-size-fits-all entitlement that would place trillions in obligations on our children and grandchildren without giving any thought to how we were going to pay for it."

There is a heated debate in the ranks of Bush's most ardent supporters about whether they should go public with their concerns and risk hurting his re-election chances. One of those debates is taking place within the conservative Heritage Foundation, whose president, Ed Feulner, has written two recent newspaper columns criticizing out-of-control spending. At the same time, the latest figures from the Congressional Budget Office which show that the fast economic growth and low inflation are not enough to eliminate the federal deficit, which is projected to hit a record $477 billion this fiscal year.

These good questions and criticisms are significant because they come from conservative friends of the president. As Pence said in his CPAC speech, to ask such questions "is not a sign of disloyalty, but of true loyalty to principle."

Are they listening at the White House? Perhaps they think they can dismiss conservatives with the familiar, "Where else can conservatives go?" They can "go" into inaction, or they can stay home and not vote. It has happened before.

Ask President Bush No. 41, who raised taxes after promising he wouldn't. He later said it was a major mistake, but too late to win him re-election. In a close election, people of principle can mean the difference between victory and defeat.
