Live Radio Address
Saturday, December 17, 2005
Draft #810

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN
12/17/05

Good morning.

As President, I took an oath to defend the Constitution – and I have no greater responsibility than to protect our people, our freedom, and our way of life. On September 11, 2001, our freedom and way of life came under attack by brutal enemies who killed nearly 3,000 innocent Americans.

We are fighting these enemies across the world. Yet in this first war of the 21st century, one of the most critical battlefronts is the home front. And since September 11, we have been on the offensive against the terrorists plotting within our borders.

One of the first actions we took after our Nation was attacked was to ask Congress to pass the Patriot Act. The Patriot Act tore down the legal and bureaucratic wall that kept law enforcement and intelligence authorities from sharing vital information about terrorist threats. And the Patriot Act allowed federal investigators to pursue terrorists with tools they already use against other criminals. Congress passed this law with a large bipartisan majority – including a vote of 98 to 1 in the United States Senate. Since then, America's law enforcement personnel have used this critical law to prosecute terrorist operatives and supporters or break up terror cells in New York, Oregon, Virginia, California, Texas, and Ohio.

The Patriot Act has accomplished exactly what it was designed to do – it has protected American liberty and saved American lives. Yet key provisions of this law are set to expire in two weeks. The terrorist threat to our country will not expire in two weeks. The terrorists want to attack America again, and inflict even greater damage than they did on September 11. Congress has a responsibility to ensure that law enforcement and intelligence officials have the tools they need to protect the American people – yet a minority of Senators filibustered to block the renewal of the Patriot Act when it came up for a vote yesterday. That decision is irresponsible, and it endangers the lives of our citizens. The Senators who are filibustering must stop their delaying tactics, and the Senate must vote to re-authorize the Patriot Act. In the war on terror, we cannot afford to be without this law for even a single moment.

To fight the war on terror, I am using every authority vested in me by Congress, including the joint Authorization for Use of Military Force passed overwhelmingly in the first week after September 11. I am also using every Constitutional authority vested in me as Commander in Chief.

In the weeks following the terrorist attacks on our Nation, I authorized the National Security Agency, consistent with U.S. law and the Constitution, to intercept the international communications of people with known links to al-Qaeda and related terrorist organizations. Before we intercept these communications, the government must have information that establishes a clear link to these terrorist networks.

This is a highly classified program that is crucial to our national security. Its purpose is to detect and prevent terrorist attacks against the United States, our friends, and our allies. Yesterday, the existence of this secret program was revealed in media reports, after being improperly provided to news organizations. As a result, our enemies have learned information they should not have – and the unauthorized disclosure of this effort damages our national security. Revealing classified information is illegal, alerts our enemies, and puts our citizens American lives at risk.

As the Nine-Eleven Commission pointed out, it was clear that terrorists inside the United States were communicating with terrorists abroad before the September 11 attacks. And the Commission criticized our Nation's inability to uncover links between terrorists here at home and terrorists abroad. Two of the terrorist hijackers who flew a jet into the Pentagon, Nawaf al Hozmi and Khalid al Midhar, communicated while they were in the United States to other members of al-Qaeda who were overseas. But we did not know they were here until it was too late.

The authorization I gave to the National Security Agency after September 11 helped address that problem in a way that is fully consistent with my Constitutional responsibilities and authorities. The activities I have authorized make it more likely that killers like these Nine-Eleven hijackers will be identified and located in time. And the activities conducted under this authorization have helped detect and prevent possible terrorist attacks in the United States.

The activities I authorize are reviewed approximately every 45 days. Each review is based on a fresh intelligence assessment of terrorist threats to the continuity of our government, and the threat of catastrophic damage to our homeland. During each assessment, previous activities under the authorization are reviewed. The review includes approval by our Nation's top legal officials, including the Attorney General and the Counsel to the President. ~~This program has been~~ have re-authorized this program more than 30 times since the September 11 attacks – and ~~we~~ will continue to do so for as long as our Nation faces a continuing threat from al-Qaeda and related groups.

The NSA's activities under this authorization are thoroughly reviewed by the Justice Department and the NSA's top legal officials – including the NSA's general counsel and inspector general. Leaders in Congress have been briefed more than a dozen times on this authorization and the activities conducted under it. Intelligence officials involved in this activity also receive extensive training to ensure they perform their duties consistent with the letter and intent of the authorization.

This authorization is a vital tool in our war against the terrorists. It is critical to saving American lives. The American people expect me to do everything in my power under our laws and Constitution to protect them and their civil liberties – and that is exactly what I will continue to do so long as I am President of the United States.

~~Thank you for listening.~~
